

IN THE REALM OF MUSIC

"William Tell," Rossini's Old Work, Next Metropolitan Revival.

By Frank H. Warren.

The next revival scheduled for the Metropolitan Opera House is Rossini's familiar, by name at least, "William Tell." It is many years since, in its original form, this work has elevated the Metropolitan stage, although its plot, scenery and some of its music were utilized last season by The Mask and Wig Club of the University of Pennsylvania and given at the Metropolitan to a delighted audience. We recall the hero's remark that he expected to live in luxury on the royalties from the famous overture—quite a popular piece with orchestras that go in for descriptive things like "dawn," "storm," &c. Mr. Gatti's orchestra, directed by Papi, will try its hand at it. The performance is set for Friday, Jan. 5, and Mr. Danie will have the title role. Martelli is Arnold, Mardones Walter, Didur Gessler, D'Angelo Melchior, Bloch a fisherman, Bada Rodolfo, Picco Leutold, Miss Ponselle the Matilda, Mme. Sunfelus Jenny, Tell's son, and Mme. Perini Edvide. Mr. Thewman is stage manager, August Berger has arranged the dances and the non-urban scenery has been painted by Vittoria Rota of Milan. The dates of the dress rehearsals, it is surmised, will be announced later.

Mr. Gatti's guess that his new "Thais" would prove a good Christmas matinee attraction was a good one. The opera's bright and cheery Christmas spirit and its holiday atmosphere were just the magnets to draw a big audience, though the fact that Mme. Jeritza was in the cast and was doing her new part for the second time may have had its influence upon the public. The opera went well and may be said to have served as an extra rehearsal preparatory to its next showing on a subscription night. The cast was almost the same as at the revival—Messrs. Harrold, Whitehill, Ananias and Misses Ryan, Robertson and Telva being the main impersonators. In the evening Verdi's "Ernani," with Miss Ponselle and Messrs. Martelli, Ruffo and Mardones, held the boards.

Great Clearaway, Wednesday, of Women's Fine Coats, Capes and Wraps

At One-third to One-half less than original prices

$40 $60 $90 $120

These are the models whose prototypes have made our season a great success. The simple, beautifully made models, chosen by smart women.

The stunning wrap-around coats, usually with shawl collars of fur, the soft-line wrap-like coats, whose chic depends so much on the way they are worn, the straight perfectly hanging coats for the woman who prefers the trim silhouette—bloused coats, in fact no smart fashion is missing.

The majority are fur-trimmed and these furs were purchased before prices advanced early in the season.

Fox, wolf, caracul, beaver, squirrel are the furs used, generously for collars and sometimes for cuffs.

Fur collared capes in the $40 group.

Self-trimmed coats, too, in the less expensive groups.

Evening wraps of luxurious brocades and velvets in the $90 group. Many individual coats and wraps, copies of imports and several fur-lined capes in the $120 group.

The best soft pile fabrics are used in black, taupe, the browns and blues of today and an occasional dark dull red.

Note:—These wraps were every one made to our order and, therefore, the workmanship was carefully watched.
